

Presents:

Indigenous Peoples' Rights in the Field

2nd Annual Course & Fieldtrip

August 6-12, 2012

Amubri, Talamanca, Costa Rica

Instructors: Ms. Adilia Caravaca
Professor Mihir Kanade

Description: This course aims to undertake a study of indigenous peoples' rights through the lived experience of an indigenous community close to the Caribbean coast of Costa Rica. The course combines theoretical and normative areas of indigenous peoples' rights with field study, and includes the experience of being hosted for 5 days by a group of indigenous women from the community. The course is ideal for human rights advocates working with NGOs and civil society organizations, practitioners, academics, and students studying in areas of indigenous peoples' rights, human rights, environment, gender and development.

Language: English

Costs: $1,700 USD (Academic Credit)
$1,350 USD (Non-Credit)

Registration is now open.
Only 25 seats are available. Apply Now!

